literature, which shall always be freely open to the scientific men from every country.

2nd. The mutual improvement of the members in periodical reunions for the reading of medical papers and the discussion of medical subjects.

3rd. The diffusion of American contributions to medical science.

4th. The furnishing of information to newly arrived medical students from America, relative to the prosecution of their studies in Europe.

5th. The cultivation of a scientific and social acquaintance with the medical men of the Old World, who are hereby welcomed to a participation in the benefits of the Society.

ARTICLE III.

OF THE MEMBERS.

Section 1.—The membership of the Society shall be confined to the Graduates and Students of the regular medical profession.

All elections of members must be by a majority in ballot. The members shall, according to their professional standing, and the exercise of certain rights in the Society, be divided into three classes :—Active, Honorary, and Privileged.

Section 2.—The Active class shall consist of the members chosen from the Graduates who are citizens of the United States of America, and resident in Paris.

After due notice of their election, they shall each pay an initiation fee of ten francs, sign the Constitution, and conform to the By-Laws of the Society.

The Active members shall provide for the general welfare of the Society, and they alone shall have the right of voting, of holding office, and of nominating candidates for membership.

Section 3.—The Honorary class shall consist of the medical men whom the Society in electing, may deem worthy of marked respect. They may be chosen without regard to their country or residence.

The name of every candidate for Honorary membership shall be first submitted to the Society, and if approved, it shall be ascertained whether the candidate is willing to sustain the proposed relation. If he is willing, he shall be formally elected.

The Honorary members shall enjoy all the rights and privileges of the Society, except those exclusively granted in this article to the Active members.

Section 4.—The Privileged class shall consist of two orders of members :

1st. Of those who may be elected from among Graduates, not eligible as Active members, but who may wish to avail themselves of the scientific advantages afforded by the Society ; and

2nd. Of those who may be elected from among medical Students in Paris.

After having received due notice of their elections, and recorded their names in a book prepared and kept for the purpose, the Privileged members shall have the free use of the books and papers of the Society ; they may attend its meetings, and upon invitation by the Presiding officer, may participate in its discussions.

Section 5.—No initiation fee, or regular, stated payment, shall be received from Honorary or Privileged members.
